

Fig. S3. Principal component analysis (PCA) conducted with moderate- and high-impact variants predicted within samples of each type. The analysis clearly separated field isolates and laboratory strains of the same type (A), with ~80% of the variability from each class explained by the first two principal components (B).